

Another Successful Season for ACT VII

24 May 2008

Aylmer Community Theatre's seventh season pleased audiences and adjudicators alike. The ambitious lineup of "Sadie Flynn Comes to Big Oak", "The Farm Show" and "The Prisoner of Second Avenue" showcased the talents and versatility of our company in performing these three very different plays. The WODL Festival entry, "The Farm Show", directed by Laura Jean McCann, was nominated for the Outstanding Ensemble award, while the other entry, "Sadie Flynn", directed by Barbara Warnock, received nominations for Best Actor in a Major Role (Ron Sawyer) and Outstanding Lighting Design (John Bardwell). "Sadie" was also the first ACT production to be included in the Aylmer Performing Arts Council's subscription series. To round out the playbill, "Prisoner", directed by Ron Sawyer, was well received by audiences, who were especially fond of the character of Harry, played with gusto by newcomer Paul Blower. Congratulations to everyone who took part in this very successful season.
